PREFACE

An essential part of the successful operation of state government is the effective use of all available information resources. It has become increasingly apparent that there is a need to draw together information about all the various known and little-known libraries and information resources available in state agencies and departments in California. Time has never before been available to collect and document information about the aggregate resources of these agencies, although the staffs of the Administrative Legislative Reference Section and the Library Development Services Bureau of the California State Library are in contact with staff in many of these libraries.

An opportunity to compile an initial inventory of data about these information resources presented itself when the California State Library obtained a Title II Public Works Employment Act grant in 1978.

The PWEA Project Staff with the assistance of a number of state agency librarians, designed a questionnaire which was used to gather and compile data about these library and information resources. This publication is the result of their efforts.

We hope that this first compilation of data will present an organized view of the aggregate information sources now known to exist in state government and that it will be a useful tool which will encourage an active sharing of the resources represented in this directory among all state agencies.

INTRODUCTION

This survey of approximately 160 state agency libraries and information sources was conducted between June 1978 and March 1979. At the outset of the project, several librarians were consulted concerning information to include on a questionnaire. After taking their recommendations into account, we devised a survey form that encompassed the many facets of California state agency libraries.

We supplemented written survey responses with visits to 20 libraries in the Sacramento area, and many phone calls. The telephone proved to be an invaluable tool since what we envisioned as a simple form elicited some complex and interesting answers. For the sake of standardization we edited the responses, but tried not to change their meaning. Some smaller libraries were linked with the parent organization under the heading "Other Department Libraries." Any omissions, miscues, misspellings, misinterpretations, etc. are the responsibility of yours truly. Remember: "To err is human, to forgive divine."

Directory entries are arranged by formal agency titles such as the "Department of Education." The library name index is arranged primarily by the library's familiar name. Here, for example, The California Maritime Academy is found under the heading, "Maritime Academy, California." A personal name index of librarians and other state employees supervising agency libraries is also included.

CAL INFO will be periodically updated. We would appreciate being alerted to any new libraries or changes that would affect the information presented in this directory.

Finally, I personally would like to thank the following people for their supervision and assistance: Sheila Thornton, Chief of State Library Services; Irene Stone, Supervising Librarian, Administrative Legislative Reference; Mary Ellen Bailey, Senior Librarian, Administrative Legislative Reference; Mary Goodrich, Library Technical Assistant; and Suzanne Grimshaw, Library Technical Assistant.

The California State Library provides reference services and library materials to State Government and, through interlibrary reference, to all the people in California. Any state employee may borrow directly from the State Library. In addition, anyone may come in person to use the collections and reference services of the various State Library Sections. Advisory and technical assistance to California public libraries is provided by the Library Development Services Bureau.

Separate card catalogs are maintained in the Law Library, the Govennment Publications Section and the California Section. Periodical holdings are included in the California Union List of Periodicals, a computerized listing, which is available on microfiche from the California Library Authority for Systems and Services (CLASS.)

Limited copying service (from books, periodicals or microforms) will be provided when needed for state business or to satisfy interlibrary loan requests. Coin-operated copiers and microform reader-printers are available for public use. The photoservices section can supply projection prints from microfilm and copies of photographs. A price list is available.
